The Department of Social and Health Services (DSHS) domestic violence program provides significant state and federal funding dedicated to providing emergency shelter and supportive services for victims of domestic violence and their dependent children. In state fiscal year 2015, DSHS disbursed $10,231,522 to 44 emergency domestic violence shelters across the state of Washington, 52 percent of which was from state funds. Local domestic violence programs served 23,728 victims of domestic violence and their children in 2015, 5,690 of whom received emergency shelter. Domestic violence programs consistently report that DSHS funding is critical to keeping their doors open and providing life-saving services to members of their communities.

“\[I will never forget the day when the shelter director made me laugh, and I heard my own laugh - something I hadn’t heard for a long time. It was something I had forgotten even existed. This place means the world to me and I am thankful every day for their selfless care for me and the other shelter residents.\]”

Shelter and Supportive Services  Local domestic violence programs provide emergency domestic violence shelter to victims of domestic violence and their dependent children. In addition to shelter, residents receive supportive services such as advocacy, legal assistance, access to support groups, and other specialized services based on each person's unique needs. The majority of service recipients, however, receive non-shelter based services such as advocacy, assistance with protection orders and other legal issues, and access to support groups. In 2015, the 44 domestic violence shelter programs provided 207,002 shelter bed nights to victims and their families. Victims stayed in shelter an average of 36 days in 2015.

Meeting Survivors’ Needs

Beginning in July 2008, survivors receiving services at domestic violence programs funded by DSHS had the opportunity to provide confidential feedback on the services they received. In response to two questions answered by 5,782 survivors in 2015:

- 5,370 (93%) responded that as a result of receiving services, they know more ways to plan for their safety
- 5,257 (91%) responded that as a result of receiving services, they know more about community resources

These outcomes are consistent with the findings from two national multi-state studies that documented the experiences of survivors that received emergency shelter1 and non-shelter based services2 from domestic violence programs.
